One of the attendees, my good friend Brock Pierce (off-scale), is responsible for building up a multi-billion dollar new form of virtual currency and trading in on-line gaming. It occurred to me that taking some of your methods from the real world of finance, trading, etc., could be applicable here. This hasn't been done before, and could make for some rather interesting and extremely profitable results. The smart boys, like yourself, from the real world of finance haven't gone in there yet. I don't think they know about it, much less understand it yet, because it isn't on their respective menus yet. Perhaps something is there, perhaps not, but it would be interesting to explore with him.
